Co-Founder at WOWLife World, Global - Neuro-Theology
North Western Province, Sri Lanka

Summary

My experience spans across private, public, intergovernmental and civil society spheres. The entities that have been under my purview, have continuously focused on bringing equilibrium to areas that warrant balance and justice. Having lived within the context of armed conflict and post-conflict rebuilding in Sri Lanka, the need to fully understand the psychology behind motivations toward conflict, whether at the State or individual level, has been an important facet of my work from a very young age. The deconstruction and continued re-learning of what reconciliation means, at a personal, collective and national level, has therefore taken the forefront in my work. This has resulted in myself being conferred appointments with national and inter-governmental establishments (including those of the United Nations), to lead initiatives designed to protect and promote inter-racial, inter-denominational and inter-religious dialogue.

This component of protecting important human rights also takes focal place in my work and advocacy as the co-founder of the WOW LIFE Global movement and ministry, alongside my wife Fiona. Apart from reconciliation, the ministry also focuses on minority rights and youth empowerment in Sri Lanka. WOW's (under the banner of Apostolic Diocese of Ceylon) take on reconciliation has moved beyond the orthodox boundaries of religious confinement, and draws from a larger body of work, including science and psychology, with emphasis on reconciliation as healing, at the spiritual, anatomical, and social levels. Being bestowed the title of National Coordinator by the Sri Lankan government in 2018, my work with WOW has also provided agency to the free churches in the island and strengthened the discourse on their place within the minority rights framework. Through this coordinatorship, over 500,000 peoples, belonging to the free churches were represented, and gains achieved, continue to feed into the institutional memory of the way forward for minority rights in Sri Lanka. Through the social empowerment arm of our ministry, Warehouse Project, youth in impoverished neighborhoods are provided the means to finish school and are also trained in technical vocations, enabling them entrance into the job market, with an emphasis on the promotion of economic and social rights, which are so vital to countries such as Sri Lanka.

While the context and environment of my work constantly evolves, the end goal remains the same; that of empowering and enabling the individual holistically, in order to transform the collective in a meaningful and beneficial way.
